PICTURES OF THE SOUTH. WE published yesterday an editorial from the Journal of Commerce, which we hope will have its proper effect upon the press of the North. Mr. PRIME, the editor, has quite a large and deserved reputation as a writer of great point, and an accurate and impartial observer. His travels in other countries have been very popular, and we hope that his people will listen to him now with the same confidence. Mr. PRIME has just returned from a long journey through the South, and we have no where seen a fairer statement of its condition, nor a juster appreciation of the causes of its distress, and the means of its restoration. The whole is summed up in the words "want of capital." It does seem strange, but it is true, that the North does not begin to appreciate the ruin it has wrought. Politicians discuss Southern strength and Southern interests, and possibly political Southern combinations, as if it was the same South that so proudly and confidently commenced the war of 1860; and they seem afraid to increase the natural resources of the South for fear of its renewed strength. The political agitation at the North has had as much to do with the mistrusts of capitalists as the condition of the South itself. And sensible men seem unwilling to understand that a government of Northern capital would more readily effect a speedy, a hearty, and a prosperous reconstruction than any military government, or any scheme of suffrage. Now both the politicians and the people of the North are educated through their press, and if such papers as the Times, the Tribune and the Herald, instead of trusting to the casual correspondence of men who use their columns occasionally for their own special purposes, would send intelligent observers throughout the South who would not talk politics at the hotels, but make it a point to associate with the business men, and study the leading material interests of the country, the people of the North would soon understand the secret of what is called in political phraseology disaffection, but which is really the depression of poverty, and which will disappear before the hopeful energy of returning capital. found that his lungs were fall of the dust from the grindstone. In access the had collected to such an extent of the equite hard.

Mr. Prime is right also in saying that there never was such a field for the successful employment of capital, whether it be used for the Mr. Prime is right also in saying that there never was such a field for the successful employment of capital, whether it be used for the lower transfer in the successful employment of capital, whether it be used for the lower transfer in the successful employment of capital, whether it be used for the lower transfer in the successful employment of capital, whether it be used for the lower transfer in the successful employment of capital, whether it be used for the generous purpose of giving aid or the selfish purpose of making profits. There is no money in the country, and there is no credit. Nobody can venture because nobody has wherewith to enture Diantations are abandoured, first-rate opportunities for business establishments are neglected, the school and the press are feeble because those who see the opportunity have not the means, and those who have the means do not see the opportunity.

The enormous rate of interest which has been paid in the last year, especially for agricultural enterprises, is not only ruinous but it disturbs the confidence of all real and substantial capitalists. Men with the money to lend, and who have made it by steady industry, feel very naturally that the borrower who is willing to pay twenty-five or thirty per cent. must be playing a desperate game, and the consequence is that the real capitalists, the men who are willing to make fair investments on fair security, feel unwilling to venture into a business which is neither more nor less than gambling. In this view it is much to be regretted that our Legislature, in its repeal of the usury laws, did not make their repeal a gradual one. That the repeal of the usury laws is right in principle no one doubts, but that, under the circumstances, the absolute repeal was injudicious we have no doubt. We believe that the power to demand, and, under the circumstances, to enforce an exorbitant interest has kept away more capital than it has brought in. If the Northern Press is really in carnest its present desire to serve the purpose of reconstruction, the observation of Mr. PRIME will be a safe guide. If it will only inform itself of the magnificent resources even now of these prostrate and despoiled "Districts," if it will impress upon Northern capital the many ways in which capital can be judiciously employed; if it will enforce upon the people that now the question of re-construction is an industrial rather than a political question; if in a word, it will follow the sure and honorable course of Mr. PRIME, it will contribute more to a great and happy result than by the surest political philosophy or the cleaverest party hits.

OUR NEEDS.

The following remarks, which we find in an address recently delivered before the Mechanics' Association of Danville, Virginia, are quite as applicable to this latitude as to the Valley of the Dan. Major Sutherlin says: We are now in a state of transition. Socially, as well as politically, everything is unsettled; and, as yet, there is no intelligent plan of progress; no practical principles agreed on for building up prosperity. Staggered by the shock of the tempest that so fearfully swept over us, there yet lingers an apathy that is slow to realize the terrible truth of the ruin around us, and paralyses every effort for concert of action. We must nerve ourselves to meet the occasion. Let us learn first of all that disaster is not, of necessity, the herald of despair. The very ruins will give material to the builder, and the ground has other uses than for graves. If we would be a great people, we must consent to the changes that have come, and direct to advantage those that will rapidly follow. The sudden and comby education and habit, we had regarded as permanent, has been met by a stubborn indisposition in the great mass of the people, even to accustom their thoughts or adapt their habits of life to the new order of things. The return of general prosperity.

CHASTELLAR'S

For Removing Superfluous Hair.

TO THE LADIES ESPECIALLY, THIS INVALUABLE

The Ladies Especially, This invaluable depliator recommends itself as being an almost indispensible article to female beauty, is easily applied, does not burn or injure the skin, but acts directly on the roots. It is warranted to remove superfluous hair from low foreheads, or from any part of the body, completely, totally and radically extirpating the same, leaving the skin soft, smooth and natural. This is the only article used by the French, and is the only real effectual depliatory in existence. Price 75 cents per package, sent postpaid to any address, on receipt of an order, by BERGER, SHUTTS & CO., Chemists, March 30 197 No. 285 River st., Troy, N. Y.

This great r-vivifyer is offered to the public, that all who will avail themselves of its remedial power may be benefitted.

who will avail them elves of its remedial power may be benefitted.

It only requires a fair trial to confirm its invaluable agency in diffusing through each channel of the human organization a restored vitality. It invagorates and embues the Lungs with h-althful elasticity; restores warmth, which is their essential element; rouses the sluggish vessels into activity; heals the affected lobes; purifies and enriches the blood; regulates the circulation; induces free and easy respiration, and expels, through its administration, each and every concemitant disorder present in the melady recognized as Consumption, and hitherto deemed hopeless and incurable.

This compound is perfectly safe, possessing neither narcotic nor emetic properties, which unfortunately are always employed as essentials in every preparation for Cough or Lung affection—a mistake which too often in its irritating and debilitating consequences, only conduces to much general derangement of the system, destroying appetite and creating an injurious nervous extement, augmenting suffering with frequent fatal results.

Hinder the influence of this approved and invaluable

Suits.

Under the influence of this approved and invaluable Specific the most distressing Cough yields, difficulty in breathing and pains and soreness subside, hemorrhage is arrested, and health and strongth re-established.
